

March - The month of graduation ceremonies

All attendants are asked to stand up, bow and sit down to show the respect for each guest speaker.

Most school students sing a song that is traditional for commencement ceremonies as well as their own school song. Graduates usually need to practice and remember the phrases before the ceremony. Many people say that singing these songs is the most memorable part of the ceremony.

March is the month of graduation since school year starts from April in Japan. Students wear a school uniform if they have one, or a formal suit or a dress for the ceremony.

The main purposes of the ceremony are to award diplomas to students, to show appreciation to teachers and to congratulate graduating students.

There are some schools that invite guest speakers such as athletes and other celebrities.

Food for happy occasions

Kohaku Manju

Sekihan

Japanese consider red and white as auspicious colors. Therefore, “Kohaku Manju” (red and white color buns) with red bean (azuki) paste filling are distributed at the time of a celebration.

“Sekihan” (red rice) is also a Japanese traditional dish for happy events. It is sticky rice steamed with red beans (azuki) which give a reddish color to the rice.

“Sekihan” is often served on special occasions throughout the year, for example, birthdays, weddings, graduation and some holidays because of its red color.
